Richard Habgood

President Elect for the Association for Project Safety (APS) and a construction design and management consultant specialising in construction best practice, project management, mediation, health and safety risk management, inspections, auditing, and training.

With almost 45 year's experience Richard trained originally as a Quantity Surveyor, and for over 25 years was a director, with specific commercial and health and safety responsibilities, for a Midlands based company specialising not only in Local Authority refurbishment works but also building, and civil engineering works associated with plant and equipment installations for the food, beverage, automotive, and aerospace industries.

Passionate about education and raising awareness thresholds for identifying hazards and minimising risks associated with in the construction industry, especially working at height, Richard walked away from a roof fall whilst conducting a lone worker roof dilapidations survey as a young surveyor in 1972.
